What are the benefits of procedures and the industry?

Planning and management of animal disease outbreaks will maximize the effectiveness of the emergency response and minimize the social, economic and environmental costs associated with the outbreak. Knowing where animals are located and how to contact producers is the key to rapid, accurate and cost-effective disease response. Premises identification is a critical component in developing a national traceability system.

Do I need to provide an application for each location with livestock and/or poultry?

An application should be provided for at least one premises, preferably the primary premises. A primary premises is the legal land location on which the main animal operation is located. If you have multiple premises, you have the option to complete an application form for each additional premises. On additional forms, complete sections I and III. The information from section II does not need to be supplied on additional forms unless the information differs from the information supplied on the original form. If you have more than five premises, please contact your local Manitoba Agriculture GO Office for assistance.

I had a number assigned by the Canadian Cattle Identification Agency (CCIA) year ago, is it the same as my Manitoba Premises Identification Number?

No, they are not the same numbers and the numbers from CCIA have now expired. The Manitoba Premises Identification Number had been validated to ensure the accuracy of the information and follows national standards. The way to tell the difference is that the Manitoba numbers start with MB10... and the numbers from CCIA started with MB3... CCIA now requires Manitoba Premises Identification Numbers and producers can call CCIA at 1-877-909-233 to get their number added to their account.
